Extravagant Economy.

JOHN JONES he was a thrifty man
And Mrs. Jones was, too—
That is to say,
Good Mrs. J.
Was thrifty and would do
Her share in saving, but she thought
Her husband was a bit too taut.
He kept the purse strings tied around
His fingers in a twist,
And every time
She got a dime
He had to force his fist,
Don't spend so much," he'd always
Say.
We're saving for a rainy day."
John owned a lot of property
In buildings, farms and grain,
With stock galore
And stuff in store,
But never stopped the strain
To gather in all he could get
Against the day that might be wet.
And still his wife could scarcely find
Enough to eat and wear.
Her bonnet had
Grown old and sad,
Her clothes made people stare,
But John stayed in his narrow way
And harped upon "the rainy day."
Two years went by; John saved and Saved—
Until the "wet spring" came,
When floods poured down
On farm and town
And washed away the same,
Including John's possessions, which
Now had made him very rich.
John and his wife took to the hills
To save themselves, and he
Began to swear
And rip and tear
At his adversity.
Indeed, it was enough to cause
A man to break the ten first laws,
But Mrs. J. was less disturbed,
And as she shook her head
At John's distress
And wickedness
In swearing so she said:
Now, John, don't carry on that way;
You saved it for a rainy day."

A Famous Dwarf.

Geoffrey Hudson, the famous dwarf Charles L., was introduced at court for the festivities attending the nation. By an odd conceit he was seated in a cold pie, the crust of which being removed disclosed the dwarf fully dressed and making his way to the king and queen. At the age of twenty he was eighteen inches high, but before attaining the age of twenty he grew several inches additional. Geoffrey, like most dwarfs, was limited intelligence, but of intense curiosity and large self conceit. It is asserted by many scientific authorities that this is a characteristic of dwarfs.

The Theater of Dionysus.

That was probably one of the earliest theaters built was the theater of Dionysus, which was begun five centuries before Christ. The seating capacity of the remarkable building is said to have been 30,000. The theater of Dionysus was erected when Greek art and literature were in their prime. Here were presented to appreciative spectators wonderful works of Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides.

The Burglar's Grasp.

Did it ever strike you that a burglar of all men is most sensitive to the loss of things? Can't say it ever did. How do you like it? He always throws light on his shady transactions with a dark lantern.—Timore American.
